

DEMPSEY-GIBBONS FIGHT TO BE HELD

Kearns To Take Charge Of The Gate Receipts

GREAT FALLS, MONT., July 3.—(By the Associated Press)—The Jack Dempsey-Tom Gibbons, heavy-weight championship fight suddenly called off at midnight last night, was put back on its feet again today and will be decided in the big pine bowl at Shelby tomorrow as scheduled.

Jack Kearns, manager of the world's heavyweight champion, at a conference which broke up at 2:45 a. m. today, agreed to send Dempsey into the ring against the St. Paul challenger tomorrow and gamble for the final $100,000 installment due Dempsey on his $300,000 guarantee. The promoters guaranteed the preliminary expenses of the show.

Major J. E. Lane, of Lewistown, Montana, who resigned as trustee for the promoters yesterday, after failing to raise Dempsey's $100,000, decided to continue as trustee and assist the promoters in untangling the muddled finances. Kearns will have jurisdiction over all gate receipts until the champion's $100,000 is obtained. The gate receipts then will revert to the promoters.

Loy J. Mollumby, of Great Falls, who signed the articles assuring the championship bout for Shelby, today is back in control as promoter, assisted by his associates. Mayor Jim Johnson, of Shelby, who personally put $100,000 in the venture, also is back.

The fight was actually called off at 12:30 o'clock this morning after an angry argument between Jack Kearns, the champion's manager, and George H. Stanton, president of the Stanton Trust and Savings Bank, in a room crowded with newspaper correspondents. Stanton appeared to tell Kearns that the $100,000 which the champion's manager had demanded, was not available and he saw no prospect of raising it.

"I feel that Dempsey ought to fight," Stanton said. "He already has received $210,000."

Kearns declared he would accept $50,000 in cash at once and get the remaining $50,000 from the first money that went through the gates.

Stanton advised that it was too late to consider any such proposal and that the $50,000 in cash was not available as the $5,000 each, pledged from the Montana business men who had attempted to raise the money, had been returned.

Some of the newspaper men asked Stanton point blank if his statement meant that the fight was off.

"As far as I'm concerned, it's off," the banker replied.

Kearns, his face flushed with anger, turned on his heel and said:

"That's good enough for me; it's off."

Major Lane, who was asleep at another hotel, was awakened and informed that there would be no fight. He hurried to Kearns' room to begin the series of conferences that resulted in the restoration of the battle. Kearns offered to agree to a post-mortem until July 25 to enable the finances to be completely reorganized. However, it did not meet with the approval of the promoters.

Kearns asked the newspaper men just what they thought of the situation and they unanimously were of the opinion that the fight should be held.

The champion's manager hesitated. He then proceeded immediately where the promoters were conferring. The proposal was not immediately accepted.

The first announcement—or the last—to the newspaper men came from Lane, who opened the door of the conference room and shouted:

"The fight is on!"

The conferences of the night were always peaceable and often through the closed doors of the room loud and angry voices were heard. The manager also clinched his argument by pointing at the clock and stating that the contract for the Dempsey-Gibbons fight had expired at midnight.

Up to the last minute Kearns believed that the fight was off.

As the torrents of the molten lava from the belching Mt. Less than 24 hours after they left, the entire town was destroyed. Thirty thousand were made homeless and millions were lost in the disaster which continued several days after the first eruption of June 17.

Charges And Denials At Stannard Hearing

DELAWARE, O., July 3.—(By the Associated Press)—With one day's testimony already before them, the state civil service commission today plunged into the second day of its hearing on the appeal of Mrs. Mae E. Stannard, former chief matron of the Girls' Industrial School, removed by Director of Welfare John E. Harsh on charges of incompetency, inefficiency, mismanagement of inmates, padding of pay rolls and dishonesty, with superior officers. Mrs. Stannard seeks reinstatement to her position through an order of the commission.

Yesterday's sessions, held at the school, nine miles from here, were resumed in a large extent by testimony of witnesses on alleged harsh forms of punishment administered to the girls, including locking them in their rooms for a number of days, tying their hands and feet, tying towels over their mouths, forcing them to sleep on the floor, and in some cases placing them in a cellar chamber known as the "dukeagon."

Testimony that such forms of punishment were used during Mrs. Stannard's administration, and that in addition, girls saved logs for a cabin erected on the grounds, added to the construction of cement walks and carried heavy stones, were given by employees and former employees of the institution and by the girls themselves. It being brought out, however, that such penalties were inflicted following serious infractions of the rules or when inmates could not otherwise be controlled.

Allegations also were made that Mrs. Stannard ordered parole officers and employees to insert in their monthly expense accounts items of $2 for taxi fare whether they had used or not.

The property was bought, it is understood, to satisfy heavy damage suits brought by Wm. J. Lester, the owner, against the miners' union to recover for alleged damages to his property and the deaths of the men employed by him at the time of the riots.

The legion has recognized this fact and our common action in the days of the past for the defense of right in the world cannot fail to continue to work for the highest welfare of our two countries."

Text of President's Address

The following is the text of the President's address:

My Countrymen: As I stand here in the shadow of the great hills, my mind reverts to the broad banks of the broad Potomac. There, as here, to an American proud of his country and revering her traditions, there is much of patriotic interest, and between these rugged mountains and those fertile lowlands I find much in common. Living history records many indissoluble links to one of which it seems fitting that I should direct your attention today.

Of the many rooms in the White House, which possess the peculiar charm of association with epochal happenings, the one most fascinating to me is that which formerly comprised the Cabinet room and the President's study. Through its high windows one's gaze is drawn irresistibly to the towering granite shaft, whose very grandeur, exceeded by no other monument in the world, admirably symbolizes the matchless character of George Washington. Harding Talking Too Much, Says Westerner

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
(Copyright 1923 By The Portsmouth Times)

SOMEWHERE OUT WEST, July 3.—This is a story about a super common citizen. Some one described President Harding that way in Kansas. Well, listen to another super common citizen who heard the president's speech in Wyoming and who has read most of the West and maybe he is not. But certainly no one would accuse big Charlie Irwin of unfriendliness to Warren Harding.

Irwin is well known from one end of Wyoming to the other, occupies the position of general agent for one of the railroad lines, has a big ranch of his own, is in close touch with all kinds of enterprises and has been a vital part of many of them himself.

"Yes, sir," he said by way of introduction as he settled some 250 pounds of himself in the smoking car. "I like Harding and want to see him re-elected, but he's declaring himself too much."

"What do you mean by that?" the writer inquired.

"Well," drawled Irwin, "you see a good many years ago my brother Fred and I came to Wyoming as a couple of cow punchers. We needed a job. There had been a good deal of cattle thieving and lots of shooting and I knew they wouldn't take just anybody without looking 'em over pretty carefully. We went up to the Carrys to see what could be done. I told my brother Fred I would take a lot of conversation to land the job and told him to speak up. We got the job all right but I noticed during the talk that my brother Fred never said a word."

Minority Political Groups Planning Combined Action

CHICAGO, July 3.—(By the Associated Press)—Preliminary plans, whereby minority political groups may unite for action are expected to be considered at the opening session here today of the conference of minority political bodies, labor organizations and co-operative societies, called by the farm-labor party which is also meeting in convention here.

The keynote address, expected to be the guide which will be followed in the discussions will be made today by Lieutenant Governor George F. Conrads, of Wisconsin.

Questions to be considered by the conference include means of promoting agricultural prosperity, reduction of the federal budget, water ways, the merchant fleet, prohibition, education, tariff and income tax revision and child labor. Without seeking to amalgamate the participating groups, an effort will be made to map out an acceptable program for 1924 that will command the support of all elements not satisfied with the two old parties, according to Jay C. Brown, secretary of the farm-labor party.

More than a thousand delegates are registered for the sessions, representing the non-partisan league of Wisconsin, farmer-labor party, progressives, American labor party, Progressive Farmers of the Pacific Northwest, National Women's Party and Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, and delegates from central bodies, state federations and local labor councils. The American Federation of Labor is not represented, nor is the Socialist party.

President Faced A Strenuous Program

ON BOARD PRESIDENT HARDING'S SPECIAL TRAIN, July 3.—(By the Associated Press)—President Harding faced today the most strenuous day's program of his western trip in the smallest town he has yet visited. The program had to do with the Oregon Trail celebration and the town is Meacham, Oregon, ten miles from a railroad and with a population of fifty-one persons.

The population of the little town however, was augmented greatly by visitors from all parts of the state and from adjoining states, joined in the celebration of the eightieth anniversary of the arrival of the first wagon train in the Willamette Valley.

Reports received by the presidential party said automobile parties had been arriving in Meacham for several days and that by the time the chief executive arrived there the population will have increased just about one thousand times.

An idea of the part the president will play in the celebration may be gleaned from the program:

Arrive at Meacham at 7:00 a. m. Presidential salute of twenty-one guns.

The president welcomed to Oregon by reception committee headed by Governor Pierce and escorted to reviewing stand.

Pioneer pageant depicting the coming of the white man.

Luncheon in tent on pagan grounds.

Pioneer dance on monster dance pavilion, grand march to be led by President and Mrs. Harding.

Introduction of president and party to those who blazed the old Oregon Trail.

Patriotic exercises, special music for championship of the president along patriotic lines, playing the history of the old Oregon Trail with the history of the United States.

Grand pow wow between the president and Indian commissioners, and smoking of the pipe of peace.

Dedication of the old Oregon Trail and unveiling of monument dedicated to the first wagon train which came to the Willamette Valley in 1843.

Offer Million For Stock

NEW YORK, July 3.—Thomas H. Tracer, representing a Toledo (Ohio) syndicate, has made a bid of $2,000,000 for the 720,000 shares of the Willits-Overland stock held by Francis C. Gaffey, receiver in bankruptcy for the Willits Corporation. This was disclosed today before Federal Judge Knox in proceedings at which creditors seek to have the stock sold by Mr. Gaffey for $3,000,000 to previous bidders whose identity has been kept secret.

The creditors' bidders were said by David H. Miller, counsel for the receiver to be H. L. Thompson, a director of the Willits Corporation, and Dillon, Reed and Company, each offering $1,500,000. He asked to be corrected if he was wrong about this, but no one in court rose. He objected to the clerk of mystery about the creditor's bidders.

The Tracy bid is the third to be made to Judge Knox and the second of $3,000,000. The other offer was made by George W. Brown, of Detroit, for 300,000 shares at $5 per share. A certified check for $150,000 accompanied the new offer.

Judge Knox adjourned the hearing until tomorrow to give Mr. Tracey, who was in court, time to determine whether his syndicate would allow a disposition of the $150,000 deposit to be made by the court in the event that the proceedings shall fall through.

Comfort Station Assured For West End

At a meeting last night of the West End Improvement Association, further discussion was heard on the proposed waiting and comfort station, which is practically assured. In the absence of the President, G. W. Steers, manager of the local Steers furniture store, L. C. Peck acted as chairman. A committee composed of Alonzo Sommer, W. M. Knight and L. C. Peck, appointed at last meeting to work out a contract with the Portsmouth Street Railway and Light company and with the owners of the Massie building, for the purpose of carrying out the comfort station, reported that favorable progress was being made. Their plans will be ready for action at the meeting next Monday night.

The only other matter of importance which came up for discussion was the proposal to relight the "town clock" in the St. Mary's church tower Fifth and Market streets. The clock has been dark for the last seven years. Leo Sommer and John Snyder were appointed to make the arrangements.

All members of the association arranged to be present at the next meeting as several important matters will be discussed.

Semi-Annual Appropriation Ordinance Is Passed By The New Boston Council

Passing of the semi-annual appropriation ordinance which provides for an expenditure of about $17,000 for the next six months was the main legislation before New Boston Council last night. This amount is several hundred dollars more than the amount required to operate the village during the first six months of the year. The increase was made necessary through the increase in salaries given to firemen and policemen. An ordinance was also passed increasing the salary of the traffic officer from $1200 per year to $1600 per year. Leslie Harris is the present traffic officer.

Legislation was passed providing for the issuance of $7,000 and $4,000 in bonds. The $7,000 is for sewer

Preference is the best reference. The original Ward's "Crushes" cost no more than imitations. Ward's "Crushes" give you more for your money in wholesomeness and taste. Ward's Crushes owe their distinctive and delightful flavors to the natural fruit oils of oranges, lemons and limes. To these have been added pure cane sugar, citrus fruit juices, U. French Modes at a Glance A Prediction For Fall

As Prepared By Our New York Office After Viewing New French Importations

Silhouette

Apparently, the coming season silhouette is to be uncompromisingly straight, though this is perennially varied with pleats, ruffles, panels, bows, flounces. These variations are subtly accomplished so as to give the straight-line effect. Some of the frocks which feature this silhouette are absolutely bodiless. Some of them have flat narrow backs, absolutely untrimmings, while some of them would seem to argue that the gown should more in backward. But through all these innovations straight lines seem to dominate.

Skirt Lengths

Are somewhat shorter for street dresses than preceding season. Although all of the Paris modes have not yet been shown, this seems carried by the Parisian to many of afternoon and evening frocks. Some of the dresses which show a circular tendency at the bottom are slightly longer.

Waist-lines

Waist-lines, where there are such things, are still below normal, and promise to be more exaggerated for the coming season. There is the decided preference in the very newest models for no waist-line at all. In the tailor modes this is very conspicuous. Where there is a suggestion of a waist-line, this is accomplished by drawing the skirt at one side only, but not in an actual drape effect. There is some indication of a banded waist-line, and which, of course, is below normal. What and where the waist is and is not, is going to be a very significant point during the fall of 1923.

Trimmings

Trimmings as sponsored by Paris, are to be a rather important part of the fall modes, but just how and where this trimming is placed is more important than all. Frocks, whether they are tailored or for more formal occasions, are trimmed in anything but conventional style, and trimmings appear as all-over affairs on the hybrid panelled, the sides of a dress and the all-over sleeve. Many exquisite embroideries and appliques have been imported. It is noted that the most salient characteristics in fall modes will undoubtedly be responsible for much for trimmings, which will be used on all as well as on dress. Trimmings are not less important than they were for the spring season; they have only changed their manner of being applied.

Neck-lines

These promise novelty in the shape of the new square and pointed lines, which is predicted by some houses as dominating more than ever as season advances. Many of the recent imports show the bateau line, more oval than is sometimes seen, while others feature the absolute choker line, which probably will not be adopted by the American designer.

Sleeves

In contradiction to mid-season and summer, sleeves are long and tight-fitting in tailor types, long and flowing in other modes, with some evening and afternoon types showing none at all. The newest sleeve which Paris has shown for the three-piece costume is full and baggy at wrist-line, with tiny sharp cornered cuff. The new note also is the sleeve trimmed at top and bottom, with center part smooth and tight-fitting. Sometimes the tight-fitting sleeve is seen in formal afternoon models, this being a different innovation.

Colors

The cardinal colors are to the fore for fall. In the Paris collections a great deal of black is shown, while the browns will evidently be in as much favor as they were for spring, with taupe, navy and decidedly conservative shades arising logically for the popularity of tailored cloth models for street wear. For evening, the bright vivid colors are seen, including the all-white frock embellished by the use of a single vivid color somewhere. Metal effects of all types, brocades, metal cloth will add their note for evening wear.

Hem-lines

Hem-lines are carrying on their promise when Spring 1923 made its initial bow to the fashion world, and are slowly achieving even lines. Most of the imported dresses stress this fact. The new mode of trimmings makes this more possible. The panels, when employed, are usually on the front of the garment and sometimes only extend slightly below the hem-lines and sometimes not at all below.

Panel

Panel, as the Parisian sees them, are entirely different from what we have heretofore seen. Panels as a side embellishment of a gown are no longer in vogue. They are mostly front affairs with a touch of Egyptian inspiration, either full or pleated. These hang as two separate entities from the front with only a slight line of demarcation in the middle. There is also the single front panel, which is seen on the new type of gown dress, tailored at hem-line, triangular in shape. There is also the panel effect which hangs triangular shaped at the sides from the Egyptian circle, and which is new. Panels are still good, but put on differently, trimmed differently and altogether of different character and inspiration.

West Union, Ohio, July 3.—Dear Dolly—If a young man should call on a young lady and she was enjoying his company but she realized it was almost an hour past the time when a young man should say good-night, what should she do? Should she suggest the hour of his departure? Should she tell him to call again? Should she tell him how much she had enjoyed his company? I will thank you very much for this information. Also, Dolly, I wish you would tell me how many Pollyanna books there are, their names and where you can buy them.

SUNDAY READER.
It would be perfectly all right for you to suggest his departure explaining that you had enjoyed his company, but that you don't have callers later than a certain hour. If you care to have him, ask him to call again. I am sure he will be reasonable about it. There are 2 Pollyanna books, "Pollyanna" and "Pollyanna Grows Up", which may be bought or ordered from any book store, or borrowed from the public library.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

"You mustn't be jealous," he went on happily.

NO sooner had Nancy and Nick and Mister Sky Bow stepped through the big rainbow doorway, than the big rainbow door slid down right out of the sky behind them and shut them in.

"They were in Rainbow Land at last."

"There's another name for Rainbow Land," said Mister Sky Bow. "It's Happy Land. No matter what goes wrong, the Rainbow Landers see the happy side of it. Why, here comes one of my friends. It's one of the Nosesys."

"One of the Nosesys!" Nancy couldn't help saying. "Why what a funny name. How did he get it?"

"Wait till you see him and then you'll know," smiled Mister Sky Bow. "It's as plain as the nose on your face. I mean on his face."

"Well, how do you like me?" asked the Nosey coming nearer. "You're all looking so hard, I suppose you're admiring my long nose."

As he came close, the Twins could hardly keep from laughing, for the Nosey's nose was quite a wonderful affair, coming down quite to the middle button on his coat.

"You mustn't be jealous," he went on happily. "We can't all have long noses. But it certainly is wonderful. Oh, how I love to smell dinner cooking. I can smell so much it's almost like eating it!"

"Even when you have onions?" asked Nick. "And cabbage? And boiled vinegar?"

"No, don't have those things in Rainbow Land," said Mister Sky Bow. "But if we had, we should learn to like them. We make the best of everything."

"Very good advice," nodded Mister Sky Bow. "Come along, kiddies. (To Be Continued)

JACK DAW'S ADVENTURES — THE BAD GIANT

"We'd better get out of here before father finds his kettle is broken," whispered Trixie to Jack. "As soon as he finds that his kettle is gone he'll mix some more out of wild berries and then he'll punish all of us." So Trixie led the way to a big strange trap.

As Jack stood looking at this trap he heard a faint barking. "That sounds like a dog," he said. "Why, it is," replied Trixie. "That's your dog, Flip, and he's just a short ways from here." "Give," said Jack, "I'd like to join Flip and see if I've caught any fish."

beautifully carved mahogany bedposts are those upon which fell the eyes of Andrew Jackson when opened from the troubled slumber which even to this day occasionally falls to the lot of an over-weary President. Sunk into the marble mantle piece is a bronze tablet recording the circumstance that it was in this room that Abraham Lincoln signed the great emancipation proclamation, which struck the shackles of slavery from millions of human beings.

Yet another episode of hardly less importance in the building of our mighty nation took place within these walls. Before my mind's eye as I stood in that historic chamber a few days ago appeared the vivid picture of a bearded giant, a man of massive, muscular build, with a face of rugged features, a head of iron, and a heart of gold. He was the embodiment of dignity and courtliness, John Tyler, tenth President of the United States. Facing him, from a chair constructed for a massive frame, his powerful spirit gleaming through his cavernous eyes, was the lion-visaged Daniel Webster, Secretary of State.

The door opened and there appeared before the amazed statesman a strange and astonishing figure. It was that of a man of medium height and sturdy build, deep chested, broad shouldered, yet little in movement and soft of step. He was clad in a coarse fur coat, buckskin breeches, fur leggings and boot moccasins, looking much the worse for wear. But it was the countenance of the visitor, as he stood for an instant in the doorway, that riveted the perception of the two chiefs of state. It was that of a rugged, untamed, and untamed, a face that seemed to suggest of fanaticism, bronzed from exposure to pitiless elements and seamed with deep lines of physical suffering, a rare combination of determination and gentleness—obviously a man of God, but no less a man among men.

Such was Marcus Whitman, the pioneer missionary hero of the vast, unsettled, unexplored Oregon country, who had come out of the West to plead that the state should acquire for civilization the empire that the churches were gaining for Christianity.

Many of the exploits of America's resolute sons are recounted in prose and verse. How often in our youth, and even in later years, have we been thrilled by the story of how "on through the night rode Paul Revere, through every Middlesex village and farm" to call the Minute Men to enlist at Lexington and fire "the shot heard 'round the world." How many times we have shuddered at the impending fate of the Shenandoah Valley with "Sheridan twenty miles away." I loved the martial notes of these stirring verses as a boy. I love them still.

Race Against Time
But, when I stood in that historic room in the White House and my imagination depicted the simple scene, I could not but feel that the magnificence of Marcus Whitman's glorious deed has yet to find adequate recognition in any form. Here a man who, with a single companion, in the dead of winter, struggled through pathless drifts and blinding storms, four thousand miles, with the sole aim to serve his country and his God. Eighty years and eight months ago he was pushing grimly and painfully through this very pass on his way from Walla Walla to Fort Hall, then abandoning the established northern route as impassable, off to the south through unknown, untrodden lands, past the Great Salt Lake, to Santa Fe, then hurriedly on to St. Louis and finally, after a few days, again on the homeward-bound trail to his destination, taking as many months as it now takes days to go from Walla Walla to Washington.

It was more than a desperate and perilous trip that Marcus Whitman undertook. It was a race against time. Public opinion was rapidly crystallizing into a judgment that the Oregon country was not worth claiming, much less worth fighting for, that, even though it could be acquired against the insistence of Great Britain, it would prove to be a liability rather than an asset.

It is with sheer amazement that we now read the declarations of the leading men of that period. So good an American, so sturdy a frontiersman, so willing a fighter, as General Jackson, shook his head ominously in fear lest the national domain should get too far outspread, and warned the country that its safety "lay in a compact government." Senator McDuffie, of South Carolina, declared he "would not give a pinch of snuff for the whole territory," and expressed the wish that the Rocky Mountains were an impassable barrier. Senator Dayton, of New Jersey, said that, with very limited exceptions, "the whole country was as irreclaimable and barren a waste as the Sahara desert," and that malaria had carried away most of its native population. Even so far-seeing and staunch an advocate of western interests as Thomas Benton protested that "the ride of the Rockies should be made our western boundary, and avowed that "on the highest peak of the state of New Mexico, a monument should be erected, never to be thrown down."

Spoke In Earnest Terms
Webster, although not definitely antagonistic, was uninterested and lukewarm. Years before he had pronounced Oregon "a barren, worthless country, fit only for wild beasts and wild men," and he was not one who changed opinions readily. But neither was Whitman one easily dismayed. Encouraged by the manifest friendliness of President Tyler, in portrayed with vivid eloquence the salubrity of the climate, the fertility of the soil, the magnitude of the forests, the evidences of ore in the mountains, and the splendor of the wide valleys drained by the great rivers. And he did not hesitate to speak plainly, as one who knew, even like the prophet Daniel.

"Mr. Secretary," he declared, "you would better give up all thought of the coal and mineral fisheries of Newfoundland than to barter away Oregon."

Then, turning to the President in conclusion, he added quietly but beseechingly:

"All I ask is that you will not barter away Oregon or allow English interference until I can lead a band of stalwart American settlers across the plains. For this I shall try to do."

The manly appeal was irresistible. He sought only the privilege of proving his faith. The just and considerate Tyler could not refuse.

"Doctor Whitman," he rejoined sympathetically, "your long ride and frozen limbs testify to your courage and your patriotism. Your credentials establish your character. Your request is granted."

Whitman's strategy was true statesmanship. Substantial occupation would make good the claim of the United States, and that was what he had initiated during his few days in St. Louis. A few months later he had completed an expedition of eager souls, and led a train across plains and mountains along this unblazed trail.

What a sight that caravan must have appeared to the roaming savages! And what an experience for the intrepid pioneers!

More than two hundred wagons, bearing well-nigh a thousand emigrants, made up the party. They traveled by substantially the same route that Whitman had taken when he first went out to Oregon; from a cavernous near what is now Kansas City they moved due northwest across northeast Kansas and southeast Nebraska to the Platte River; followed the Platte to the middle of what is now Wyoming, thence crossing the mountains by way of the Sweetwater Valley and the South Platte; and from Fort Hall, following the wagon route, roughly paralleling the Snake River, into Oregon. The difficulties of the trip, involving beside the two hundred wagons, the care of women and children, and of considerable herds of live stock, were such that its successful accomplishment seems almost miraculous.

Stern Determination Triumphed
But stern determination triumphed and the result was conclusive. Americans had settled the country. The country belonged to them because they had taken it; and in the end the boundary settlement was made on the line of the forty-ninth parallel, your great Northwest was saved, and a veritable empire was merged in the young Republic.

Never in the history of the world has there been a finer example of civilization following Christianity. The missionaries led under the banner of the cross, and the settlers moved close behind under the star-spangled symbol of the nation. Among all the records of evangelizing effort as the forerunner of human advancement, there is none so impressive as this of the early Oregon mission and its marvelous consequences. To the men and women of that early day whose first thought was to carry the gospel to the Indians—to the Lees, the Spauldings, the Grays, the Walkers, the Leaslies, to Father De Smet and his assistants, to De Mers, and to all the others of that glorious company who found that in serving God they were also serving their country and their fellow men—to them we pay today our tribute; to them we owe a debt of gratitude which we can never pay, save partially through recognition such as you have accorded it today.

New Assurance In Recalling Heroism
We may reasonably do more today than we did in the past, for the heroic deed in the possession of the imperial domain which they revealed, and the life they made possible to the virile, aspiring and confident Northwest. I find new assurance in recalling the heroism, the resolution, the will to conquer of these pioneers.

I wish I might more effectively visualize them. Not very long ago I saw the covered wagon in the moving picture. I sat entranced. There was more than the picturesque, more than sorrow and discouragement, more than appealing characters and enthralling heroism. There was more than the revelation of the irresolute, who failed in fitness to survive, more than tragedy and comedy in their inseparable blend. There was more than the scouts who surpassed our fancies, more than nature's relentless barriers revealed. Everywhere a flame was the soul of unalterable purpose and the command of sternness of elemental greatness. Still more, there was determination to do themselves, not asking the government to do, but for government only to sanction or permit.

Much the same spirit was revealed in the making of the Central West, where the determined pioneers built in the confidence which they had in themselves. They battled with nature and every obstacle which they encountered, heroes of a new era, as the name of the land, and they conquered and wrote big their part in the making of the greater republic. Their victory proclaimed the strength of resolute purpose, and the human genius, confident in itself and eager to achieve on its own account.

The lesson cannot fail to impress itself. In this test of self-reliance, citizenship there came the rugged, untamed, wholesome West. Greater things were wrought, larger accomplishments were recorded, greater victory was won in this wholesome, inspiring individualism than will ever attend paternalism or government assumption of the tasks which are the natural inheritance of the builders who may better serve for themselves. Government may well provide opportunity, but the worth-while accomplishment is the privilege and the duty of men.

I thank you from my heart for permitting me to participate in doing homage to those brave souls. I rejoice particularly in the opportunity afforded me of voicing my appreciation, both as President of the United States and as one who honestly tries to be a Christian soldier, of the signal service of the martyred Whitman. And finally, as just a human being, I wish I could find words to tell you how glad I am to see you all, and reflecting as you do, from untrodden eyes, the happiness of spirit breathed by your own best song:

There are no new worlds to conquer—
Gone is the last frontier.
And the steady grind of the wagon-trail,
Of the sturdy pioneer—
But their memories live like a thing divine,
Treasured in Heaven above.
For the trail that led to the storied West,
Was the wonderful Trail of Love.

Charges

such transportation or not. This money, it was said, went to Frank Kelly and Pearl Vior, employees at the institutions, whose automobiles were used from time to time. Miss Edith Grapp, a former parole officer, made such allegations, declaring that Mrs. Stannard declared that the men must be paid for the use of their cars.

Miss Grapp admitted during cross examination that she had an "unfriendly" feeling for Mrs. Stannard partly because she had gone home on a leave of absence because of a brother's illness and had returned to find her position filled. She also testified that she had heard Mrs. Stannard refer to the girls as "thieves and prostitutes" in the presence of some of them.

Signed Blank Paper
Efforts of Stewart A. Hoover, Mrs. Stannard's attorney, to "lift down" charges that employees of the institution had signed blank papers upon which charges against the chief matron later were written and filed with Director Harper resulted in a statement from Guy Thomas, a carpenter at the institution, that he had signed such papers although he did not have direct knowledge of all the charges made. He had signed the charges, he said, in an office on the fifth floor of the Hartman building in Columbus after they had been handed to him by a man named "Smith." He had been directed to sign "a lot" of the charges by John McNamara, of the welfare department, he said.

McNamara telling him that the "girls" were "in the house," he added in cross examination that he had felt that Mrs. Stannard was "doing me wrong" when she refused to grant him a raise in salary, although others had received increases. He had carried messages from employees and teachers at the school to Mrs. McNamara after that time, he said.

Deny They Were Given Exercise
Statements of Mrs. Alice Ollm, former matron at the school, who, after the Epileptic Hospital at Gallipolis, to the effect that girls who were locked in their rooms for punishment were given six blankets each, although deprived of their beds and were taken out for exercise or to work each day, were denied by several of the seven girls who testified. Three was given as the maximum while sleeping on the floor, and one girl said she had been locked in her room for a number of days without being given an opportunity for exercise.

Mrs. Ollm said she had permission from Mrs. Stannard to lock up girls in "extreme cases" and to blind them up. She said she had done so and had bound towels over girls' mouths but had never "gagged" them.

Immure Broke The Furniture
Offenses for which such punishment was given were cited by the girls as talking from windows, "being impudent" and refusing to obey orders. One girl said she had broken up furniture and torn plastering from the walls and another said she was placed in the "dungeon" overnight for running away. She said Mrs. Stannard had publicly told her her conduct was "low down and contemptible," but added that "I really do think I deserved it."

Today's hearing was expected to be marked by the return of large numbers of women who were present yesterday. Women's organizations of the state and several welfare groups were officially represented, while many other women attended unofficially.

Today's testimony was expected to consist largely of an attempt to show methods used by Mrs. Stannard in dismissing employees of the school. At the end of yesterday's session, less than half the witnesses called by Mr. Harper had testified before Commissioner B. B. Davis and Wm. S. Bundy, but Randolph Walton, of Columbus, and Berne Jones, of Delaware, the directors' legal representatives said they hoped to finish their case by tonight. Mrs. Stannard has 38 witnesses subpoenaed in her effort to regain her position.

Workman Falls Into Vat Of Scalding Water At Breece Plant; Is Rescued

Quick work by Thomas McGraw of New Boston, saved Isaac Ferguson, 45, married, of Long Meadow addition, Scitoville, from probable fatal burns Monday when he fell into a vat of scalding water at the Breece manufacturing plant, New Boston. As Ferguson fell, McGraw grabbed him by the coat and held him, Ferguson going into the water up to his hips.

The scalding vat into which he fell was just before the bark is removed, is about three feet deep. Ferguson was turning logs in the vat when he lost his balance and fell into it. McGraw is a crane operator and was within a few steps of Ferguson when he fell.

The burned man was taken to the office of Dr. Martin Taylor in Scitoville, where it was found that his feet and legs were severely scalded. Later he was taken to his home and today was reported as resting as comfortably as could be expected.

Talking To Much

When we got out, he asked him why he hadn't spoken up, and this is what he answered: "How in hell would I be able to speak up if I was the smartest man in the world if I didn't say nothing."

"You see it's a mistake for a man to say too much. Hughes went around the country making speeches and you know what happened to him. Same with Mr. Cox. In politics, don't think it pays to say too much. Now, out in Wyoming, Harding made a good Western talk. It was fine. And there's no doubt the people are leaning too heavily on the federal government and saying 'Let George do it.' And he's right when he says the War Finance corporation saved the state of Wyoming. Lots of people have forgotten that we borrowed $12,000,000 from the government. But we have got to pay all that back."

"I was in Kansas City the other day after the president talked there and I tell you the fellows up there were boiling over that speech. Yes, sir, they were bitter. Now, I say, what's the use of his declaring himself about consolidation of railroads. That's something the interstate commerce commission can work out and he needn't get mixed up in it."

Thinks Denver Speech A Mistake
"Another thing, that speech at Denver was a mistake. Just as sure as you and I are sitting here beer is coming back. The prohibition stuff is a farce. I voted dry but I won't do it again. I'm not a drinking man. I don't believe I had more than a quart of whiskey in all my life. But this prohibition is terrible. It means graft and bootlegging and the stuff they sell the people is dangerous. I'll tell you why it's a farce: I travel from one end of the country to the other every year and I keep my eyes open. Within 15 minutes after you reach a hotel, you can get all the whiskey you want. And there's more high school girls drinking whiskey today than ever was known."

"Now, tell me, what's the harm in a good glass of beer or a little wine? That's what we are going to get after a while, and I believe it's a mistake for the president to get mixed up in this issue, when lots of people are changing their minds about it every day."

Market News

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, July 3.—Stock prices exhibited a firm tone in today's trading. The so-called pivot stocks, U. S. Steel, Baldwin, Studebaker and American Can, all opened fractionally higher. Gains of a point or more were registered by Dupont, Maxwell Motors and American Steel and Great Northern Ore. Some of the gains were heavy. New Haven dropping a point and New York Central, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific preferred yielding fractionally. The early market was more favorable in the rails, steels, oils and motors, gains of a point or more being recorded by the Pan American issues, Houston, Hudson Motors, Bethlehem Steel and several others. The market became irregular later when selling pressure was exerted against Baldwin which dropped a point and New Haven which dropped to 31½, another new low. Foreign exchanges showed irregular demand sterling a new low for the year at $4.56. The market developed a reactionary trend during the morning as a result of the intermittent liquidation of several low priced shares. This selling induced a spirit of caution on the part of speculative buyers for the long account who had succeeded in making up a number of the independent steel, motor, oil, rail and merchandising issues. Selling pressure was most effective against New Haven, Atlantic Gulf, American International Corporation, Central Leather and Mexican Seaboard common and the certificates all of which dropped 1 to 3 points to new low records for the year. Previously, Pullman, Pierce Arrow, preferred, and Sealed Air had been pushed up 2½ to 3 points. Call money opened at 5½ per cent and then eased off to 5 per cent.

Heavy liquidation of low priced shares unsettled today's stock market after an early period of moderate strength. New lows for the year were established by more than two score stocks. Sales approximated 67,000 shares. Closing was weak.

Chiropractors' Hearing Is Postponed

The hearing to have been given four local chiropractors, P. D. Parks, D. D. Owen, Hazel and O. L. Knechtly, in municipal court Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock, after their attorneys had entered a plea in bar. Dr. Owen is represented by Blair and Blair while the other three are represented by Bannon and Bannon.

In the plea the defendants, who it is alleged "did knowingly and unlawfully advertise and announce themselves to be practitioners of medicine and surgery in one of its branches, chiropractic," say that after having heard the affidavit read, that the State of Ohio ought not to further prosecute the said affidavit against them because that heretofore, to wit May 28, they were tried on an affidavit charging the same offense.

The defendants did not appear in court. A hearing on the cases was postponed on account of the absence from the city of City Solicitor Sherard Johnson who is expected back by Friday.

WAVERLY

Court News
Last Saturday the case of Peter Theobald versus Robert Lamb was tried in Common Pleas court. This was an action for money which the plaintiff alleged to be due him from the defendant as payment for a span of mules. When the mules were sold the consideration named was $300, only half of which was paid and a note given for the balance. The defendant in his answer stated that the mules were not sound as they were guaranteed to be, and asked that part of the purchase price be returned to him and the note cancelled. The trial consumed the whole day, a number of witnesses being examined and each attorney making an argument to the jury. About five o'clock the jury retired and was out twenty minutes. Their verdict was that Theobald should return to Lamb $75 and cancel the note. Attorneys for the plaintiff were Rankin of Washington, C. H. and C. M. Caldwell of Waverly. The defendant was represented by Robert Grimes of Jackson, H. D. McLaughlin of Portsmouth and S. D. McLaughlin of Waverly.

Spire's Questioned About Man's Body Found Near West Union Denies Knowing Anything About It

WEST UNION, O., July 3.—(Special to the Times.)—Although Sheriff Porter and Prosecuting Attorney Kessler and other county authorities believe they have in the arrest of John Spire, an Adams county young man, a person who can throw considerable light on the mystery surrounding the body of a man found near this place June 16, they have failed so far to get any information from him that would help in unmasking the affair.

Spire steadfastly denies all knowledge of the crime and insists that he was in West Virginia at the time when the murder is supposed to have occurred late in May. Sheriff Harry Dunham of Portsmouth who has helped wonderfully in checking upon the movements of Spire has furnished the local authorities with additional facts they will use in questioning Spire.

Prosecuting Attorney Kessler spent all of Monday here and was here today endeavoring to get Spire to talk. Officers are in hope that he will soon tell the truth and will finally give them the information they desire.

One thing the officers learned yesterday was from Minor Hayslip whom Spire claimed was with him when he bought the automobile held as evidence. Hayslip, the officers say, claims that he did not see Spire buy any machine.

Officers believe that the murdered man was R. M. Morris, who they say left West Virginia the same time as Spire, according to the information they have gathered. Morris was supposed to have relatives in Knoxville, Tenn. An effort will be made to get in touch with these relatives to see when they heard of Morris last.

In order to hold Spire in jail a charge of violating the prohibition laws has been placed against him. Officers claim that he has admitted buying intoxicating liquors during his visit here last month.

Here's How To Clear Rough And Bunkers

BY MIKE BRADY

Western Open Champion

In these days of narrow fairways, plentiful rough and many bunkers, it is practically essential to get acquainted with the rough and the bunkers with the least damage.

The rough, taken at large, costs more strokes than the bunkers and one of the reasons it does is the great rank and file of golfers try to accomplish too much on their recoveries.

Put the average golfer in the rough, with a possible lie, and tell him to endeavor to get approximately the same distance out of it as he would off the fairway.

Then, like as not, he makes a fizzle of the shot, thinks of the stroke gone and feels that on his next attempt he must make up for what the long grass already has cost him. That being the case, he bangs away for the less of another stroke.

Where Do Amateurs Get The Cash?

BY PAUL R. MALLON

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, June 30.—(United Press)—A new storm is being stirred up to clean so-called amateur athletes of professionalism.

Great gusts of words are blowing from east and west, howling for reform.

The latest fusillade is being directed against track athletes. It is said a great number of running stars are receiving money in secret for performing in various meets.

It is known that a policeman can't wear silk shirts and a high hat on his salary. It is known a taxi driver can't tour the world on his profits every year. It is known a poor man can't live in ease without money.

A leading runner said he had been offered $50,000 to tour the west with a bunch of gamblers for three months. Another sprinter said he had received an offer of $1,000 for one race.

Gamblers would take the runners to small towns, where there are some and still in the rough.

Now in the rough there are always two or three things to keep in mind:

One is not to tighten up on the stroke, but to relax a little more than usual.

Another is to swing more upright than usual and try to bring the club head down sharply and cleanly "on" the ball, with no attempt at follow through and no attempt at a sweeping stroke, which merely catches the blade in the long grass and stops the force of the blow.

The next thing to remember is that if the lie is particularly heavy, it is far better to play a few yards, at right angles if need be, to get back on the fairway, rather than risk losing more strokes in the rough.

In the bunkers, if the sand is loose and distance is not the object, a ways plan to hit an inch or so in back of the ball, taking plenty of sand. If the sand is packed hard, pick the ball clean.

LATONIA RACE TRACK, KY., July 3.—(Special to The Times)—It was a very ordinary Monday card that greeted the racing fans Monday, but there seemed to be just as much enthusiasm and it was a continuous guess as to which would win.

Kinks-o' the Kinks

When a player is in a hazard is there any penalty attached if he accidentally does something that limits the condition of play? Just what demands are made of the player in getting out of a hazard?

If a player improves existing conditions in a hazard, no consideration is given to the fact that the improvement was possibly accidental. This would place a premium on doing some little thing that would help the play and then falling back on the time-worn excuse that it was accidental.

In playing out a hazard a player must not move or touch anything in the hazard except that which is necessary as a result of the player taking a proper position to play out. The general principle of the rule that must be observed to escape penalties is that the player must not do anything that tends to improve the conditions of play.

In stroke competition, Smith's ball lay about five feet from the cup. His opponent's ball was about 30 yards away. Smith's opponent requested that Smith lift his ball. Smith refused, saying that his opponent's ball was more than 20 yards from the hole which removed the right to force him to lift his ball. Should Smith have been compelled to lift his ball or play it, as his opponent requested, or was he within his rights in refusing to do so?

This dispute is covered by the third section of Rule 13 relating to stroke competition. Smith should have lifted his ball or played it when requested to do so by his opponent. The rule states that the competitor whose ball is farther from the hole may have the ball which is nearer to the hole lifted or played, at the option of its owner. Failure to do so should result in disqualification.

Speeder Nabbed

When Traffic Officer Leslie Harris of New Boston sent his motorcycle over the street curbing and into a porch Sunday, while chasing a speeder through the village, the chase did not end, for Marshal William Conley and Fire Chief Charles Sims happened along about the same time and took up the chase, overruling the car near Franklin Furnace.

The driver was required to return to the New Boston Mayor's office, where he gave his name as Calvin Sheets of Huntington. He put up a $25 bond for his appearance in Mayor W. E. Nowberry's court July 10.

At Chumute Field
Mr. and Mrs. Charles King have received word that their son, Carlos, who recently enlisted in the aero department of the United States Army, is located at Chumute Field, Rantaul, Illinois, and that army life is agreeing with him immensely. He will take a course in the photograph branch of the aero service, which means he will have to master the intricacies of the aeroplane.

Stuffy Dando and Gene Bundy will furnish the fireworks for the second main-go and according to Shifty, the clever Bundy will not be there for the tenth round. Shifty said the same thing when he fought Frankie Wells the second time. Bundy at the present is arguing a little over the matter of weight and in event it can't be adjusted, Andy Parker will meet the local speed boy. Parker is considered a better performer than Bundy and will make a better bout from an spectator's standpoint than a Dando-Bundy match. In either case, however, the fans will be assured of plenty of action.

To complete the bill, Butch White and Harry Brooks, two local favorites, will be matched with good out-of-town boxers.

The seats will be on sale at the Smoke House Thursday evening.

LORDY! SOME MAD, SOME GLAD

Apparently I struck a popular subject in my last two ads. about the paving of Gallia Pike at Franklin Furnace. Judging from what I have been hearing and am being urged to keep it up. Have been making a few inquiries but can't swear that I really know why that job is taking so long. However, to a man in an auto it would seem that there's a gentleman of color in the sand pile that has a good deal of influence in certain matters. Why? Of course I can't tell any more than I can tell why some merchants are selling duplicates of our tan and black oxfords at a dollar more than I do. Another lot just in—patents with plain toes, tans and blacks, on the new French last with tips. Choice at five-fifty.

TURNING PROPHET AND PROTECTOR
THE United States agricultural department is going into the business of advising the future and protecting speculators.
Henceforth it will tell the farmer what to raise and when not to raise, at least lay down the limits in which he must sow and garner, breed and feed.

It is a big job, but it isn't as big as it is belittled. It is a scheme that will be worked against from within and without. If it tells the farmers that wheat is going to be worth $2. next year, then every land owner will put every patch he can in wheat. So down wheat comes tumbling, next year, because of over supply. If it tells speculators to raise less hogs, every stockman will raise more because he expects all the rest to raise less, so he will reap the benefit of scarcity.
The net result will be that the agricultural department will be brought into total discredit.
To import the slang of this town to the country, "the thing just can't be done."

Equally it does not appear why the government should be protecting the "unwary speculator." He doesn't need protection, but ought to be given prohibition, prohibited from speculating at all.
The schemes that some fellows advance to keep themselves in office are perfectly wonderful and absolutely impracticable.

THANKS, ENGLAND, THANKS
THE cable tells us that England hasn't the slightest intention of bartering any of her West-Indian Isles in payment, either in whole or in part of the debt she owes the United States.
That is clever and considerate on the part of John Bull and we certainly ought to appreciate it. Nothing would be easier than for him to drive a masterful bargain with us along that line. All he would have to do would be to just suggest it. A lot of fool people would immediately take it up, the Association for the Acquisition of the British Islands would be organized and properly equipped with a distinguished directorate, a crafty secretary and propaganda and the trick would be turned.

There isn't a possession of Britain in the gulf of Mexico, or the Caribbean sea, that is worth our holding. Jamaica might be esteemed to have some tactical value in relation to the Panama Canal, as a naval and aerial base, but otherwise it would be useless. Barbados is a lovely and delightful place, but it would lose its chief charm in American eyes when prohibition was extended to it. Something of its counterpart is found in Porto Rico, which we do not know what to do with.

WOULD IT WERE SO ALWAYS
LORD CURZON, the British secretary for foreign affairs, takes a most admirable stand, or rather shows a most commendable temper, in discussion, before parliament, of the seizure and confiscation of liquor from British vessels in American ports.

He doesn't engage in any blustering and fury, but frankly admits that America is within her international rights in her actions, while deploring that she, at the same time, ignores the spirit of international practice. Between the two a somewhat narrow line has to be drawn, but Lord Curzon does well to lay it down. America in this situation should not show lack of recognition of international practice, altogether, when, as a matter of fact, she does show it in part.

Assertions that America must do her moral part before the world remind us of the professions of those Puritans, whom the Saviour denounced as whiningly. In the Panama canal zone the United States gives open according to international practice, the country of nations. It lets all foreign vessels carry not only their liquor supplies, but their cargoes, through the canal zone, on the regulation that they shall not dispense any while therein. She could with just as good grace attempt to dictate the morals of the world there as in any port in North America, because the canal is American territory.
However, let that aspect go. The present thought is that if all diplomats exercised the discretion and the good sense Lord Curzon displays the world would not so frequently be embroiled.

EVERETT TRUE BY CONDO

The oldest inhabitant was around Saturday to ask if we had ever seen any such weather. He said he never had. We have and so has he. He forgets and we can't remember what the weather was yesterday, but we know we have seen every sort of weather. The weather gives us a wonderful variety, doing a powerful part in helping along the gaiety of life, but it never gives us anything new. It is a point of gratitude with us to honor and claim the weather, no matter what it is. There are some people who couldn't say a word to it if it didn't at least supply a start. There are some who have such a joyous and free way of referring to the climatic state that you are just glad to hear them.

New York-Day-By-Day
BY O. O. MCINTIRE

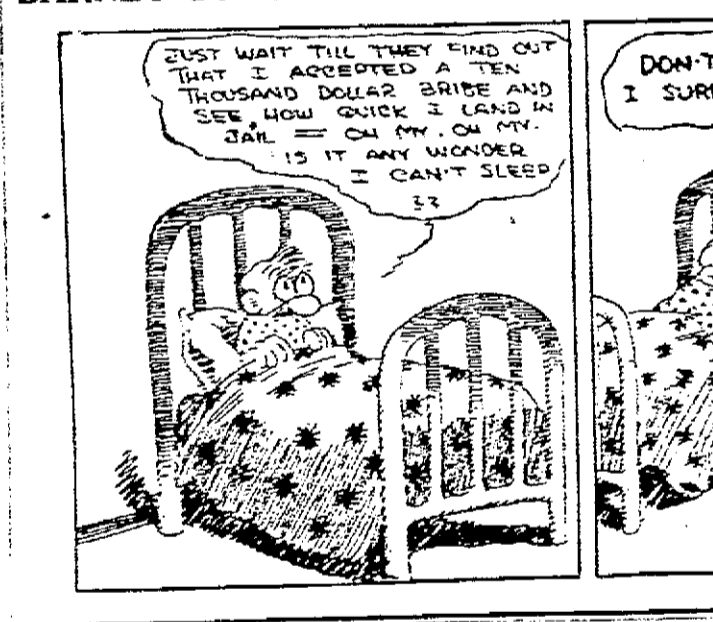

NEW YORK, July 3.—If I am for a big personal today I ask information. I work while I can write of New York and its history and condition. I can think only of the almost incredible grid that is mine. My dog Junior has passed on. I use the term "passing on" for I know the great soul of him can never die.
As this is written he rests in a little white tiled casket in the Harbortide cemetery. Along the cool green grass he lies. Over the mound will be placed a small vase with the inscription: "Junior—Faintest to the End."
He was all of that for Junior died a good death, obeying the command of his master. It was after midnight and Junior and I had gone over to Fifth Avenue for a stroll. Traffic was light and his leash had been removed to give him a few frolics.

Doc Koko's KOLUM

THE PEDDLER
By Berton Braley
On the city street, on the country road, Stopping at market or beach shade, His shoulders sagging beneath his load.
Prosser enough he seems: Moving about in his destined track, Yet in his wagon or on his back He has a wonderful fairy pack.
A peddler is head of dreams!
With routine faithfulness he plods To the market controlled by the money gods. Or out where the farmer plunges the plow, On a built-up railroad station, And he bears a packet of hopes and fears.
Of love and family, smiles and tears. To homelike people or pleasure. A peddler is head of dreams!
A POSTMAN—doing his daily job Who moves untroubled among the mob. For in his pack is the world stirred With visions and plans and schemes. With love of struggle, of faith and faith.
Of work and pleasure, of pain and pain. He brings together the ends of earth. A peddler is head of dreams!

POLLY AND HER PALS

Brothers and Sisters, I bid you farewell. Of giving your heart to a dog to read. Let Junior tempt me once of the endless things of life that many people. He has left me the precious heritage. Then he should be obeying a command of mine to make the burden double poignant. It is crushing.

I like to think that when I go, I go to the Great Adventure Junior will be there to greet me. I want to see the glory and wonder and the terrible joy and packed in that joyous emotional way he had. He was an expert of love and I refuse suddenly to believe that such a life thing can pass with what we mortals term death. I look that the lives and my sorrow is a selfish grief because I loved and miss him so.

Billie had no love for his wife's time per day, but the day when it was suddenly disappeared he offered a reward for its recovery.
"Don't know," said a friend.
"You say that the day is gone?"
"No," replied Billie; "it could not be lost."
"Then why on earth did you offer a reward for its recovery?"
"Life or please my wife."
"What, that may be, but twenty dollars is sure to bring the day back!"
